A Postcard From My Heart!

This year has gone by so quickly and I wanted to share some thoughts and say thank you.

Whether I have seen you in the last few weeks- for a moment, for a few minutes or not for months and months- know that my feelings are the same.

I am grateful to you because, this year and over the years, you have let me help you and those you know, buy real estate, sell real estate or invest in real estate so that you can build wealth allowing you to pursue your true passions.

I am grateful because I can now share some of my passions with some of your passions.

Thank you because these relationships have expanded me and created great friendships.

I am grateful because both my parents, and some of yours, are still alive and continue to share their stories.

I have utmost thanks to the circle of people around me that care, contribute and create personal and business lives that truly make a difference in the world and make my personal and business life what it is today.

Life has put a lot on my plate this year so I haven't seen you all. I intend to do that next year.

Have Yourself A Very Merry Christmas.

My expectations are that 2012 will make all your dreams come true.

Rob

P.S. During the holidays we spend time with those we care about. Take time to think about those who cannot spend time with us and spend some quality time with you by yourself. Celebrate birth and the opportunity for rebirth during this time of the year.

The past is in our hearts, tomorrow is in our dreams and today is a gift, that's why they call it the present.
